Kingston clinicians given the green light

Kingston CCG is made up of the GP practices in the Borough, who have come together to commission services for its population. This follows the government's Health and Social Care Act 2012, and means that across the country commissioning groups will take over from primary care trusts in April 2013.

Welcome to the first edition of the Healthy Living supplement in 2013.

In this issue we update you on the development of Kingston Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) and the new Stop Smoking service in Kingston.

I'm delighted to say that in December 2012, the NHS Commissioning Board announced that Kingston CCG has been given the green light for authorisation, following a lengthy and thorough assessment process. In fact we were one of just eight CCGs nationally to be authorised without any conditions, which means we met all of the rigorous assessment criteria.

That means from 1 April 2013, clinicians in Kingston will take full control of the local NHS budget and commission hospital, community and mental health services for local people in Kingston.

As the new commissioners of health services in Kingston, we are already working on improvements to different service areas. These include developing a new community wellbeing service which will launch in April 2013 to deliver joint psychological therapies and substance misuse support. We're also delivering a joint health and social care programme with Kingston Council to provide more support for people in their own homes.

However, we need your input on health services in the borough to help us develop our plans.

There are a number of ways you can get involved, including by joining a patient group at your GP practice or by attending one of our quarterly patient forums, advertised on our website.

As Chair of the CCG I'm interested in hearing your views directly, so if you have any suggestions for improving the services in Kingston please get in touch using the email address below.

We know that authorisation is just the start of the process. Now the real work begins to make sure Kingston residents get the health services that they deserve.

To find out more about the CCG, its governing body and its future plans, visit www.kingstonccg.nhs.uk.

You can contact Dr Naz Jivani by emailing: communications@kpct.nhs.uk or writing to Dr Naz Jivani, 3rd Floor, Guildhall 1, Kingston, KT1 1EU.

Dr Naz Jivani, chair, Kingston Clinical Commissioning Group.

NEXT PATIENT FORUM MEETING will be held on Tuesday 23 April 2013 7-9pm in the Council Chambers, Guildhall, Kingston KT1 1EU

Lucy Chisholm, Stop Smoking manager, talks about the recent changes to the stop smoking service in Kingston and Richmond.

New stop smoking service in Kingston

Stopping smoking is not easy but it can be the greatest single step you take to improve your long term health. Smoking is one of the biggest causes of death and long term illnesses in the UK.

If you've tried to give up before without any luck then the new Stop Smoking service provided by Kick It could be the one for you. Evidence suggests that people are four times more likely to stop smoking if they are being supported.

Kick It was awarded the contract for providing a Stop Smoking service in Kingston and Richmond following their successful track record in helping over 6000 smokers quit in Hammersmith and Fulham in the last four years.

The service offers free stop smoking clinics with specialist advisors spread across several locations in Kingston and also in the nearby Borough of Richmond. Smokers can have confidential conversations with specialist advisors who can help them to learn special techniques to give up the habit. The service also offer FREE stop smoking medications including nicotine replacement therapy (Presciption charges apply).

Kick It also have outreach teams who can be found out and about in local areas including Bentall's shopping centre, colleges, universities and various locations across the borough to talk to smokers, create awareness of the service and give advice.

Kick-it run an effective youth prevention programme including specially designed programmes for schools aimed at year seven and eight pupils. The programme was developed by Kick-it, and is called Operation Smokestorm. Community programmes for hard to reach groups enables the service to reach those people who would otherwise not seek help but would like to give up smoking.

Smokers can either use the service for one-to-one advice or attend group based sessions in various locations across the borough. Advisors can help with coping strategies and help smokers to recognise triggers. Alternatively you can pick Quit Kits from pharmacies across Kingston and Richmond or sign up for a 12 week programme with support from an advisor for six weeks. You can also access the service through your GP.

Lucy Chisholm, Manager for Kingston and Richmond said: "People are seeing a real benefit from using our service. Our advisors are fully trained and highly skilled at offering support. Some of our advisors are ex smokers so understand their clients needs perfectly. I would urge anyone thinking of giving up smoking to contact Kick It - we are here to support you."

Daughter turns midwife and delivers mum's baby

A mum told by Kingston Hospital she was "nowhere near labour" ended up giving birth on her sofa at home – with her eldest daughter as midwife.

Sara Crowden, 41, from Chessington, said the experience still had not sunk in. Her ordeal started when her waters broke in the car park at New Malden Tesco last Thursday evening, and ended at about 7am the next day when Karis-Ruby was born weighing 6lb 6oz.

by JON SHARMAN
jon.sharman@london.newsquest.co.uk

She said: "I went back to the hospital at 2am when it was quite unbearable and they said 'You're not really in established labour so I am sending you home'.

"Home I went again and when I got home I was in a lot of pain.

"When I needed them and I was quite desperate they were saying, take a bath and have some paracetamol, but I knew it was going to happen fast. All of a sudden she just came into the world.

"It was the paramedics who really shone for me, and of course Jade. I wouldn't have been able to do it without her – thank goodness she was here."

Heroine of the moment Jade McQueen, 22, said she stayed calm for the sake of Karis-Ruby.

She said: "I did not really have a choice because if you lose it you are going to stress the mum, which is going to stress the baby. I am not put off by private parts or anything.

"I had no idea what was going to happen.

"I rang 999 and they said 'If she needs to push then you need to prepare to deliver this baby'.

"She told me what to do and she stayed on the phone while I was delivering her. She anticipated exactly what was going to happen – she was really helpful."

Fall in love with your town

by NAZIA DEWJI

Kingston will feel the love this Valentine's Day as the borough's first dedicated day of action raises money for community charities.

Next week the inaugural Love Kingston day will aim to raise money for the borough's most in need with a day of action on February 14.

The event is being backed by businesses and organisations including the Rose Theatre, Kingston First, Kingston University, Kingston College, Kingston Chamber of Commerce, the Bentall Centre and John Lewis.

Bucket collections and wacky fundraisers will take place as residents show their love for Kingston.

The day of action will help thousands of people including homeless people, abused women, families without a meal on the table, troubled teenagers and even those with credit problems.

Market Place will be "loved up" with a number of spinning bikes set out for 30-second time trials being run by the Gym Group in Eden Street.

Ed Whitson, general manager at the Gym Group, said: "People can come in their work clothes and give it a go.

"It is a great thing to do to support the community.

In love with the idea: Some of those keen to take part Deadlinepix KT73763

Bike time trials: The Gym Group

"The good thing is it is not too hot so you won't work up much of a sweat but it is a great way to get active and it is for your community. Plus it is fun and trendy."

The Love Kingston appeal needs to raise £193,052 by March to meet a Government match-funding target.

Half the money raised will go to five Kingston-based charities: Kingston Churches Action on Homelessness, youth charity Oxygen supporting hard to reach young people, the Kingston Foodbank providing food in a crisis, credit union Kingston Savers and domestic violence refuge Hestia.

The other half will go to the Kingston Legacy Fund, which will donate to other good causes.

Jamie's Italian has got on board with Love Kingston and customers will be taking part on February 14 and 15.

Joanne Carson, office manager at Jamie's Italian, said: "We are keen to get involved. We want to give something back to our community through the Love Kingston appeal."

Love Kingston has been organised by Kingston Voluntary Action in partnership with the London Community Foundation.

Fundraising manager Elaine Miller said: "I am hugely excited about the day.

"I am absolutely thrilled with the number of people taking part.

"The charities bind a number of different people together and the participation is a true testament to the great communities in Kingston."

Getting involved: Chef Lewis Jones Deadlinepix KT73716

Newborn baby carried out of early morning house fire

A newborn baby and six other people escaped a burning house after an early morning fire broke out.

More than 20 firefighters battled a blaze for more than an hour in Coombefield Close, New Malden, after they were called just before 6am on Tuesday morning.

The four-day-old baby suffered smoke inhalation during a visit with their family to see grandmother.

by NAZIA DEWJI
ndewji@london.newsquest.co.uk

The fire is believed to have begun in an elderly tenant's room after an old halogen heater fell over.

Lovish Jain, 30, a tenant, said: "In the morning there was a lot of noise and then the landlady knocked on my door.

"At first I could not understand. We had to wait outside for about 45 minutes and it was very chilly – I was in my shorts. Everyone is okay."

Next door neighbour Quiteria Barros, 51, said: "I have lived here three-and-a-half years and nothing like this has ever happened before. I heard someone knock violently on the door – it was my neighbour opposite. We organised our children and the guinea pigs and went to their house.

"I saw a lady who had her hand burnt.

"There was a baby and the mother was really scared. I was so worried about the people – we don't know them well but we see everyone passing so I was worried."

All seven people in the home suffered smoke inhalation and one woman suffered minor burns to her arm. They were all taken to hospital.

A London Fire Brigade spokeswoman said the property was uninhabitable because of severe smoke and heat damage.

Watch manager Steve Preston, from New Malden fire station, said: "The house didn't have a smoke alarm, so these people are incredibly lucky to have escaped."

He also warned that halogen heaters should be placed away from furniture and somewhere where they cannot easily be knocked over.

Fire engines from New Malden, Sutton, and Surbiton fire stations all attended.

Lucky escape: The fire broke out just before 6am on Tuesday morning Deadlinepix KT73861

New line: Construction would begin in the 2020s

Boris backs crossrail plan

Boris Johnson is backing the idea of a new partially underground train line connecting south-west and north-east London, including Kingston.

Commuters could get to Tottenham Court Road from Kingston in 22 minutes by tunnel. Surbiton, Chessington South and Motspur Park would also be on the route.

Crossrail 2 was recommended today in a report by London First, headed by former transport minister Lord Andrew Adonis.

Commuters from Wimbledon, Kingston, Twickenham, would see massively reduced journey times.

Mr Johnson said: "There is no time to lose and my team will work closely with London First and others to develop plans for this vital railway."

Construction would begin in the 2020s The new line could be open by the early 2030s, and would be expected to cost £12bn.

Daughter steps in to deliver mum's baby

Sara also praised lifelong friend Steven Horton, now Karis-Ruby's godfather, who helped with the birth at the home in Moor Lane and then went back to work in north London after only two hours' sleep.

She said: "He has been my friend since I was four years old so we have grown up together. I was glad he was there."

Paramedics Louise Walker and Nicola Chambers said: "When we arrived the baby, a little girl, had already been born so we checked her over and she was happy and healthy. The daughter, who had assisted with the birth, was fantastic – apparently she couldn't even watch One Born Every Minute – but when it came to it she got stuck in and did everything she needed to do right. The mother was incredible; she had coped with the whole thing with no pain relief.

"It was our first job of the day – so it really set us on a nice feeling for the day ahead."

Security boss jailed after weapons find

A security company boss who hid a gun, ammunition and a can of CS gas in his office and a nearby caravan has been jailed for five years.

Alex Allen, 49, who ran 24/7 Security based in Gladstone Road, Kingston, appeared at Kingston Crown Court last week.

He pleaded guilty to possessing a prohibited firearm, a prohibited weapon and ammunition without any firearms certificate.

Andrew Baxter, prosecuting, said: "The strength of the case against him and the overwhelming evidence led Allen to plead guilty."

According to the company's website, 24/7 Security provides services including experienced door staff and close protection officers.

The new managing director – his brother David – said Allen was asked to leave the company after he was arrested.

Tributes to drowned student

Kingston University has paid tribute to a student who drowned in the Thames after a night out last month.

Jamie Smith, 19, of Villiers Road, Surbiton was a second-year university student studying medical biochemistry.

He was found after divers began a search near Barge Walk, Hampton Wick following reports of a person in the river near Kingston at 7.20am on January 19.

His course director Dr Nigel Page said staff and students at the school of life sciences had been shocked and saddened to learn of his death.

Mr Page said: "Jamie was a very polite and courteous young man who was always able to express himself well.

"He was very involved in university life and was a course representative – a role he performed diligently.

Gone, but not forgotten: Kingston Uni student Jamie Smith

"Jamie will be very much missed by staff and students alike."

The teenager, whose family home was in Grimsby, worked at children's play centre Jelly Bugs in Kingston.

The death is not being treated as suspicious.

Former children's services boss demands an apology

by ROSS LOGAN

ross.logan@london.newsquest.co.uk

A child protection whistle-blower has demanded an apology from Kingston Council after leader Derek Osbourne criticised her.

Olivia Butler, former interim head of children's services, claimed last week there had been a "cover-up" of failures by social workers to help 37-year-old Charito Cruz before her murder.

Speaking to the Kingston Guardian, Ms Butler said: "I think they are trying to cast doubt on my credibility by quoting selectively and without context from private correspondence about the circumstances of my departure, obfuscating the fact of my resignation."

In a prepared statement read out at a council meeting on Tuesday, Coun Osbourne said: "I am not satisfied the representation of events she is now making is consistent with the record we have."

He said the former director of children's services Duncan Clark, "had concerns about the guidance and support she was providing to staff and the state of the preparations for the anticipated Ofsted inspection".

Chief executive Bruce McDonald said: "Allegations made by Olivia Butler 16 months after the tragic death of Charito Cruz are extremely serious and need to be thoroughly nvestiged.

"As soon as the BBC aired its report – the first time I had heard these allegations – I asked Olivia Butler to disclose the basis for her claims.

"The council will investigate whatever information it receives and take any necessary action."

Mr McDonald said the domestic homicide review, first revealed by the Surrey Comet in December 2012, would take another six months to complete.

❑ The lead councillor for children's services in Kingston has admitted it "crossed her mind" to resign in the wake of the Charito Cruz safeguarding revelations.

Liberal Democrat Councillor Patricia Bamford said she had been persuaded to carry on by the borough's director of children's services, Nick Whitfield.

Opposition Conservative councillors and Kingston Labour Party have called for both Coun Bamford and council leader Derek Osbourne to quit after it was revealed Ms Cruz's baby daughter had been referred to social services twice before her murder in 2011.

She said: "It is easy to throw arrows from the outside, but it is much harder to take responsibility.

"It is about getting on and doing the job. We have already made significant improvements to the service, and I think it would be counter productive for me to go and have somebody new who wouldn't know all the issues try to resolve them."

Allegations of home care abuse show a steep rise

by JON SHARMAN
jon.sharman@london.newsquest.co.uk

The number of abuse allegations made by adults cared for in their own homes in Kingston soared in the last financial year.

There were 307 home abuse alerts logged in 2011-12, compared with 72 the year before, according to Kingston Council's adult safeguarding annual report.

The massive increase comes as the NHS and social services move to a different model of adult care, in which patients are looked after at home rather than in care homes or hospital.

Complaints increased generally, with rises in allegations of abuse at care homes, at hospital, and in public.

Tom Bell, community services development manager at Age Concern Kingston, said better co-ordination could be a factor.

He said: "I cannot see any particular reason to think the abuse is any more widespread. I cannot think why it would be increasing.

"It is not necessarily occurring more, it is just people are noticing it and having more of an idea about what to do about it and looking out for it more."

Jo Carmody, safeguarding manager at Kingston Council's adult social services and at Kingston's clinical commissioning group, said the council had tried for years to improve abuse reporting.

Serious: More than 300 home abuse alerts were logged in 2011-12

Deadlinepix KT73215

He said: "I do not think there is any evidence to suggest it is any worse than it was. We need to make sure people are mindful and they raise concerns as and when they arrive.

"People outside health and social care are becoming aware of this, and that is heartening."

The report also revealed just five of 13 Kingston care homes responded in October 2011 when social services checked on their level of safeguarding training.

Two more had to be prompted by the Care Quality Commission.

Mr Carmody said dialogue between the council and care homes was improving.

He said: "It has never been bad across the board, but there have been times when it has been difficult.

"We have had a small number of homes who came back and asked us to do briefings for teams."

Popular bandmaster dies

A former bandmaster and newsagent has died, aged 80, while doing his paper round.

Major Derek Ward, the former manager of Goldings newsagents in Hampton, was seen at hundreds of shows during his 40 years with the Horse Rangers' Association at Hampton Court.

A service will be held at Woking Crematorium on February 12, at 12.30pm.

Unsung heroes

Kingston's unsung heroes do not receive the recognition they deserve in the national honours system, according to a senior borough figure.

Representative Deputy Lieutenant Colonel Geoffrey Godbold said: "Many organisations are doing magnificent work in the borough. I am concerned, however, we are not identifying those people whose names should be put forward for national honours and awards."

Unholy trinity: Three churches vandalised

by ROSS LOGAN
ross.logan@london.newsquest.co.uk

Vandals have caused hundreds of pounds worth of damage to three Kingston churches in an apparent triple raid.

Historic stained glass windows were smashed, cupboards were ransacked and vestments were left scattered as the hoodlums searched for cash and valuables.

The break-ins, at St Luke's Church in Gibbon Road, St Paul's in Queen's Road and the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Penrhyn Road, all happened on Friday night.

A church in Twickenham was also targeted and police believe all four break-ins were linked.

At St Luke's, two windows, including one stained glass window dating back to the Victorian era, were smashed, while a gold-thread vestment was damaged, cupboards were broken into and their contents strewn across the vestry office.

Keys were also stolen – forcing the church to replace all of its locks.

Damage: Father Martin Hislop at St Luke's Deadlinepix KT73671

Father Martin Hislop said: "It was an awful thing to see. There is significant damage.

"It was very upsetting for our parishioners.

"Vandals went into our hall, smashed our stained-glass windows, went into the vestry office and deliberately destroyed the CCTV.

"They were quite methodical. They smashed the external CCTV cameras, disconnected the monitors and smashed them as well. They knew what they were doing.

"The stained glass windows will have to be replaced, but I suspect the biggest cost will be the replacement of every lock in the church, and our wall safe."

The Rev Simon Coupland, of St Paul's Church, said he believed the would-be burglar was disturbed during the break-in.

He said: "We were very fortunate. I am sure the intruder must have been disturbed.

"A window was used as means of access and a cupboard was forced open, but nothing else was damaged."

A Kingston police spokeswoman said: "Nothing substantial was taken.

"The break-ins are being linked, but there have been no arrests to date, so inquiries are ongoing."

Burglar gets 18 months

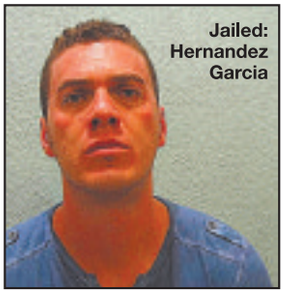

A 35-year-old Mexican man living in Brixton has been sentenced at Kingston Crown Court to 18 months in prison for burglary.

Carlos Hernandez Garcia had pleaded guilty to two burglaries in 2011, in Slough on May 18 and in New Malden Way, New Malden, on June 28.

He was a passenger in a car pulled over by police in Suffolk on November 20.

Detective Inspector Simon Day, from Kingston police, said forensic evidence linked Garcia to the crimes.

He said: "Residential burglary is a disturbing and intrusive offence and our team is dedicated to ensuring these criminals are brought to court and account for their crimes."

Pay and display parking needed? Cars parked in Ewell Road Deadlinepix KT73702

Short-term solution?

Shopkeepers under threat from overcrowded parking fear their complaints are being ignored by Kingston Council.

There are currently no parking restrictions in Ewell Road and traders have complained that the lack of free spaces is bad for business.

Councillors recently voted to defer pay and display parking until the scheme could be improved.

Kevin Jennings, whose father and uncle own CD Jennings and Sons butchers, said complaints were made to the council, but nothing has been done.

He said: "We know the council has got money from Transport for London (TfL) to do something around these parts.

by HANA HAUSMEISTER
hana.hausmeister@london.newsquest.co.uk

"Obviously we rely on passing trade, people being allowed to pull in and park for between 10 to 15 minutes to come in to us."

Angela D'Ercoley, proprietor of Casa Viva, said: "I think they need to do something to keep the business parking unimpeded.

"The only way I can see that working is short-term parking."

Councillor Malcolm Self said: "I think as a councillor I would like to see us doing something to support businesses.

"I do not want to see Surbiton or any local parts either boarded up or turned back into office-type buildings.

"The newsagent-type businesses would like limited parking and no return within an hour, but that is no good for the hairdressers or some of the other businesses."

Traders said they were concerned the problem would become worse when Surbiton Hospital was built, and said that a taxi firm was already exploiting the few available spaces.

Coun Self said: "We need to listen to people, see what they have got to say, and I think the scheme can be improved on."

'Poor security' blamed for Fairfield travellers

by ROSS LOGAN
ross.logan@london.newsquest.co.uk

A security lapse and a general lack of experience has been blamed for the mistakes that led to a group of travellers pitching up in Kingston last year.

An internal review published by Kingston Council and released to the Kingston Guardian identified two "complete failures" during the incursions on Fairfield recreation ground and Surbiton Fishponds in June 2012.

The report criticised security company Securitas for failing to inform police and the council of the travellers' movement from both sites.

But it also said council and park contractor Quadron failed to secure Fishponds, allowing the travellers to move on to the land.

As well as the failings, the report pointed to outdated protocol for traveller incursions that did not include up-to-date legal information or leadership guidelines.

Kingston Council leader Councillor Derek Osbourne said: "The main finding was we had not had a serious traveller incursion for a long time.

"The protocol we had that set out who was responsible was also a bit out of date.

Camped out: Travellers at the Fairfield in Kingston last year

"It was really a lack of experience – which is a good thing as it shows it has not happened for a long time."

The report outlined how, on June 18, three vehicles and five caravans moved on to the Fairfield shortly after 2.30pm, via a gate left open by Quadron.

The council eventually hired Securitas to monitor the site and provide updates, but on June 27 when the travellers left Fairfield – Securitas failed to inform authorities.

They drove straight to Fishponds via the gates in Ewell Road, which were in a "bad state of repair".

The travellers left at about 10pm. Again, Securitas did not inform the council, but subsequent checks concluded they had left the borough.

Coun Osbourne said: "When they left, police were not informed, but the thing causing us most concern was the security, which was poor and unresponsive."

Kingston Council has since changed its security contractor to Shergroup.

Conservative leader Councillor Howard Jones said: "The bottom line is they were caught with their trousers down and tried to regain the initiative blaming Securitas."

Quadron declined to comment, referring queries back to Kingston Council.

Charged with arson

A man accused of setting fire to clothing in two Kingston stores on December 18 has been charged with nine more offences.

Barry Davies, 52, appeared at South West London Magistrates' Court last Thursday charged with two counts of arson. He was then charged with a further nine offences, relating to shops in Kingston, Richmond, Ealing and Wandsworth.

Mr Davies, from Isleworth, was remanded in custody and will appear at Kingston Crown Court on February 21.

The chairman of a national safe pub awards scheme will represent Oceana during its appeal against losing its licence.

Awards for best watering holes

Kingston town centre's finest drinking hotspots were awarded gongs in a celebratory evening held this week.

Bar staff, bouncers, pub and club owners turned up to find out whether they had nabbed any prizes for this year's Best Bar None Awards, held at McCluskys in Kingston on Tuesday, January 29.

The awards, now in their seventh year in Kingston, aim to promote sensible drinking and recognise the positive contribution made to communities by responsible licensees.

by NAZIA DEWJI
ndewji@london.newsquest.co.uk

Best pub winner Declan Mccullough, manager of the Druid's Head, said: "We won the award for the first three years, but I am really surprised we won this year because there were a lot of good nominees."

The Kingston Guardian presented an award voted for by the public – won by Woody's for best behind the bar staff.

Jon Bacon, general manager, said: "This was a good thing to support in the community and for us it is all about going that extra mile and making our customers happy."

Winner Terry Finucane, McCluskys head doorman, said: "We deserved it. It is nice doormen are appreciated because we are often forgotten and not appreciated for the good we do.

"All Kingston's doormen are pretty good so it was probably a hard decision."

A record 17 establishments took part in the awards this year, which were organised by Kingstonfirst.

The ceremony was originally scheduled for November last year, but was postponed following the fatal stabbing of Jamie Sanderson in Oceana.

Nobody from Oceana, which received the most votes for best atmosphere from Kingston Guardian readers, was present at the awards ceremony.

Ros Morgan, chief executive of Kingstonfirst congratulated all the winners.

Seething Festival back

The Seething Festival returns to Surbiton later this month with organisers promising it will be their biggest event yet.

The festival and parade will begin at 2pm on February 24 from St Andrew's Square in the town centre.

This year a series of crafts, music and drama workshops will be held at the Lamb in Surbiton in the week before the main event.

Charlotte Robson, who runs the Craft Inn, said: "The main new additions are the workshops and this is the first year we will be having stalls at the festival.

"We were told by about 10 people last year they moved from other parts of the borough to Surbiton because of what we do. It is a great excuse to get everyone together."

There will be two craft stalls and a bar this year. Miss Robson's stall will have crochet, bags for sale, cushions, Lefi finger puppets and trinkets for children born in Seething.

It is held to give Surbiton people the chance to celebrate the life of fictional legend Lefi Ganderson, better known as Lefi the Goat Boy.

Workshops will be held at the Lamb on February 16, 17, 20, 21 and 23.

Visit seethingwells.org for more.

Hospital will get £200k for maternity upgrades

Kingston Hospital is set to receive more than £200,000 for its maternity services as two hospitals across south-west London face losing their provision entirely.

The money comes from a £25m Department of Health pot opened to applications from across the country. Several hospitals in the area have been given extra funding, with Epsom and St Helier receiving £495,000.

Kingston Hospital's upgrades will include a new birthing pool, places to sleep for partners, and wireless baby monitors.

More space will also be available for consultations.

Anna Dellaway, head of midwifery at Kingston Hospital, said: "It was fantastic news for us. We didn't quite know whether we would be successful. It will help, particularly with storage facilities and making it look a bit more pleasant.

Funding: Kingston Hospital

"Space on the floor is limited and when we bid for this money we looked at how it would improve the environment for women. To be able to purchase a reclining couch for partners to be able to stay was brilliant."

Kingston Hospital sees almost 6,000 births every year – the second highest number in London.

NAZIA DEWJI looks at the work of Hestia – which helps women subjected to domestic abuse

A refuge from suffering

Refuge: The kitchen at Hestia Deadlinepix KT73215

As you walk into this secret safe house you do not know what to expect.

The hallway is lit up brightly and there are paintings on the cream walls.

The aroma of food and fresh laundry is what hits you as you continue. And then the playful chatter of children and women as they go about their chores. It looks pretty normal.

But I am in a Hestia refuge building and many of the women I see have suffered in some way.

Hestia is a service for women and children suffering domestic abuse that supports them to rebuild their lives. In Kingston it has three refuges.

Lyndsey Dearlove, service manager, said: "This has to be a home and not a house. People need to feel relaxed here.

"I have seen women who have been in abusive relationships for 50 or 60 years before they ask for help. We have seen women come in with all sorts of injuries from cracked lips to gynaecological injuries through forced intercourse.

"But the best thing is seeing how these women change from their darkest point and become independent and empowered.

love kingston

Some women are so excited when they get to do their own shopping. I once took a woman from a south Asian background to central London and she said 'I did not know this world existed'."

On average one in four women suffer some form of abuse in their lifetimes.

Women stay in the refuge, often with their children, on average between six and nine months as they are given help finding accommodation and further support through Hestia's floating service.

The Kingston refuge for women from south Asian backgrounds is one of only three in London. Here women are made to feel more comfortable by recognising their different cultural needs.

Mrs Dearlove said: "For example in one refuge, a service user might like to drink a glass of wine but in the south Asian one we would not have that there as there may be somebody from a Muslim background."

She also explained that many of the users come from outside the borough to keep them far from their perpetrators although many of these use manipulative ways to gain information.

Mrs Dearlove said: "Children are often used. A man might ask – what does your school uniform look like? What does your journey home look like? What parks do you pass? The safety of our users is so important."

Kingston's branch of Hestia helped 42 women through refuge accommodation and 39 women through its floating service between April 2011 to March 2012.

So far this year it has already helped 76 women.

Fundraising officer Emily Gillatt said: "When people arrive a lot of them don't even have a toothbrush – that is something that costs money. Through Love Kingston we hope to get more funds to help support them better."

❑ The Kingston Guardian is backing the Love Kingston initiative, which is supporting five charities including those working with battered women, troubled teenagers, families without food on the table and debtors in the pockets of loan sharks.

The inaugural Love Kingston Day will aim to raise money for the borough's most in need with a day of action across the borough on February 14.

To donate to Love Kingston text 70070 with the code LVKG00 and the amount you wish to donate, or visit love-kingston.org.uk.

Need your memories of home

I wonder if any of your readers might recall a home for babies and children in Maple Road, Surbiton, around 1939?

It was the beginning of the Second World War and a toddler of only 18 months was sadly given up by his mother, who could no longer care for him.

The child spent two years in a Surbiton home, where he learned to walk, talk and to play with other children.

He was cared for by the kindness of people no longer there.

Thankfully, a family adopted him and he grew to be a fine man, serving in the Grenadier Guards and later devoting his life to the arts, and then the church.

Now, he would like to piece together those blank early years.

Do you remember such a place? Who ran it? What was its name?

Please email megory@mac.com if you can help with this enquiry.

Name and shame those who allowed this outrage

I wish to say a few words on the reports on the total failure of Kingston Council regarding the murder of the lady by her husband (Che 'would still be alive if council had acted properly', January 31).

This is yet another example of untrained staff with extremely over-inflated opinions of themselves and their capabilities and responsibilities in positions they are not capable of dealing with.

This shocking example of arrogance typifies the world we live in.

Council chiefs enjoying extremely comfortable lifestyles at the expense of others in more vulnerable positions, the inability to understand their place in society.

Just because they say so does not mean it is correct. I can quote from a book as easily as these people. There are far too many people doing jobs they are not suited to and too much staff rotation leaving people who are untrained dealing with the vulnerable.

And how the despicable people allowed this outrage to occur during their tenure in office is deplorable.

They should be named and shamed and thrown out of these positions immediately and forced to suffer the consequences of their actions.

Rather than this they are rewarded for these serious blunders financially, or are given meaningless titles, which only serves to inflate their egos further, and the ultimate outrage is that even after being exposed they remain in these jobs.

So this is how they save cash

Kingston Council announced recently that council tax would increase by 1.99 per cent.

It said it was necessary and that it could not cut back anywhere to save any money.

Well I have spotted one area where the council could start and that is on the roads.

This past couple of weeks, contractors have been digging up part of the pavement to install a taxi rank outside New Malden station and filling in a redundant bus layby.

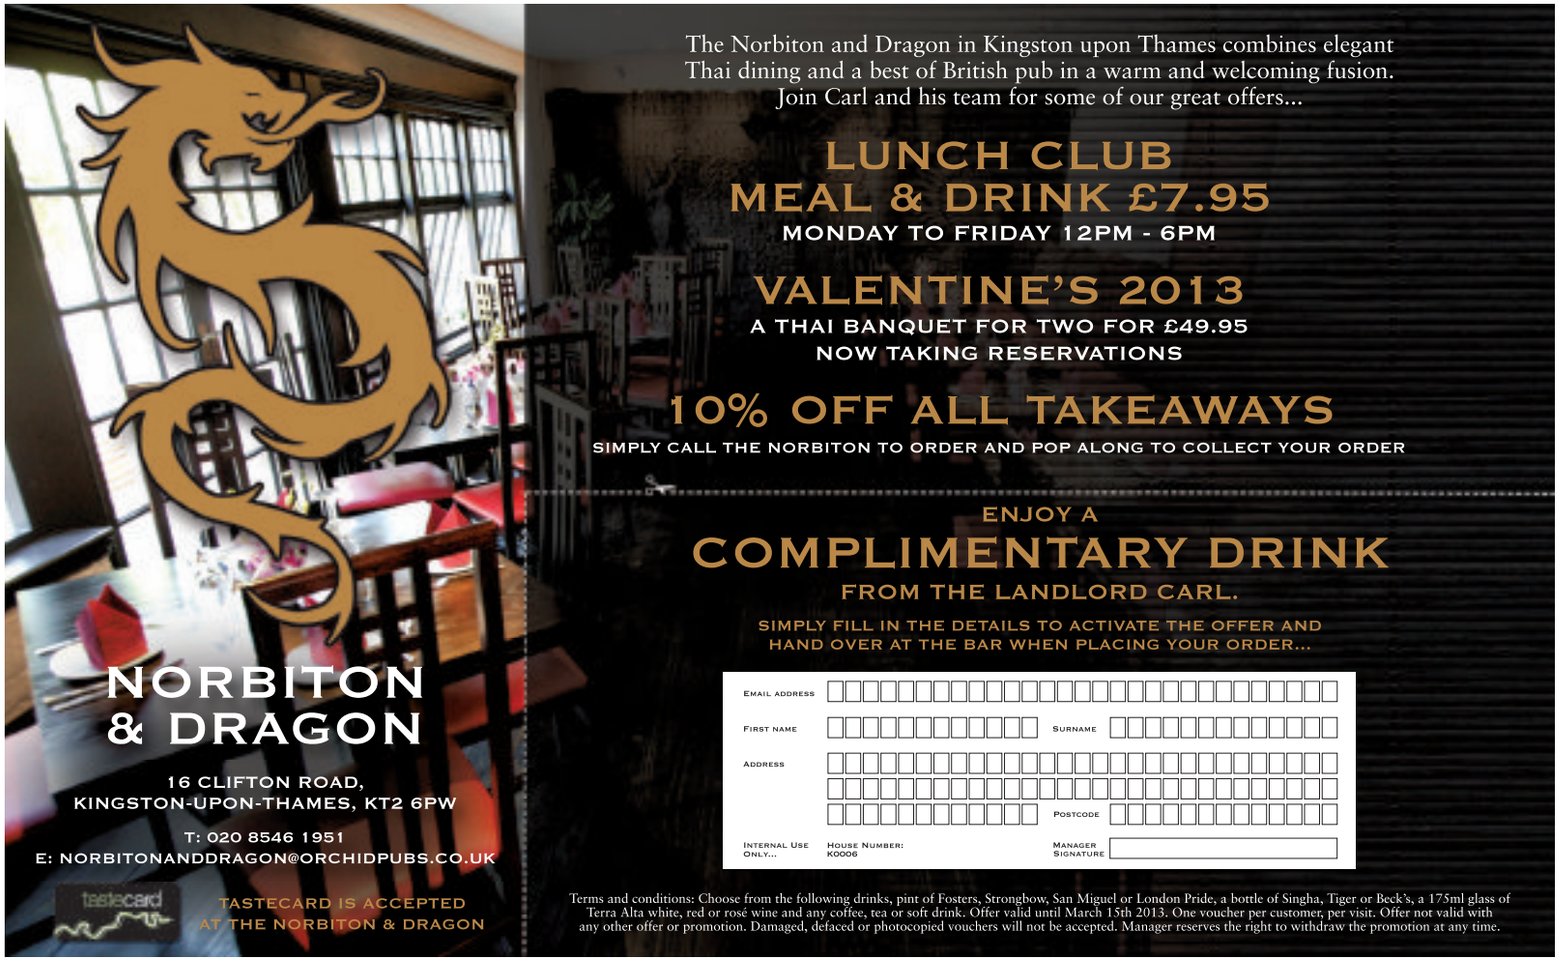

I would hardly call this essential work – and what about the cost?

Kingston is the most highly taxed borough in London.

I do not think the council is trying to save money in any way.

Other councils have done it and some have managed it. Why can't Kingston?

Fewer students enrolled

by ANDREY BULAY and JON SHARMAN
jon.sharman@london.newsquest.co.uk

Kingston University has taken on 1,500 fewer students this year to avoid being fined by the Government.

The university enrolled 14 per cent fewer students last year, although applications dropped by only 1.1 per cent.

A spokeswoman said after Government funding changes, universities could be fined if they take on too many students.

She said: "The main reason for lower enrolment numbers during the past three years is the changes implemented by the Government to the way universities are funded.

"Universities across the country received reductions to the number of students that they were funded for as a result of this policy.

"Kingston has taken the decision not to drop its entry standards as it is committed to recruiting students with the genuine passion to complete their degrees and who will have a fulfilling learning experience at Kingston University."

She said the university would not drop its fees as it would mean fewer teachers and activities, but accepted that may mean fewer applications and enrolments.

Dr Andrew Higginbottom, lecturer and chairman of the University and College Union's Kingston branch, said the university's decision to take on fewer students could also affect staff employment.

He said: "We're looking at a further percentage decrease next year. And that's our members' careers and livelihoods. We're worried there could be up to 20 per cent staff loss in the next three or four years."

Briefly

NO BOOZE: Kingston Council's licensing sub-committee has rejected an application by Pizza Planet on Tolworth Broadway to add an off-licence to the site.

The decision was made on Tuesday following a meeting last week.

A resident responded to a consultation on the application saying they feared more litter and trouble on the streets if it were approved.

BUS CHARGE: A 27-year-old man denied racially-aggravated harassment on a bus.

Stephen Mulligan, of Mason Close, Hampton, will stand trial at Kingston Crown Court in the week beginning April 2.

He remains on unconditional bail.

NEW ZEBRA: A raised zebra crossing will be built in Maple Road, Surbiton, in a bid to slow traffic.

Residents and the farmers' market rejected the initial proposal because of its location and the removal of several parking bays outside the houses.

The new scheme will introduce more parking.

HELP NEEDED: The Fircroft Trust is calling on new volunteers to help out at its Tolworth shop.

Helpers are needed at the Ewell Road branch every afternoon, to help customers and sort clothes. Call 020 8399 3136.

Be a life-saver: make sure your older friends and relatives are safe

As anyone who has elderly friends, neighbours or relatives will know, a quick visit for a cup of tea and a catch-up can often make the world of difference to older people living on their own.

And while many of the older generation are just hitting their prime, for some the little everyday things that used to take seconds can become harder as the years go by.

Testing their smoke alarm can often be among these – its position usually makes it harder to reach and changing the batteries becomes a tricky operation.

That's why the Fire Kills campaign is asking people to take a life-saving step to test the smoke alarms of an older neighbour, friend or family member the next time they see them.

A working smoke alarm can give you and your loved ones the extra time you need in a fire to get out, stay out and call 999.

And those less able to move quickly, especially the older generation, will need those vital seconds more than most.

Last year in England, half of all deaths caused by accidental household fires were people aged 65 and over.

But despite these worrying statistics, surveys show that the vast majority of older people don't consider fire a risk, and most think that they would be able to get out of their home in time.

In fact, you have less than two minutes to escape in a fire before the air becomes unbreathable and you're rendered unconscious, so an early warning is vital to make a safe escape.

Many older people who live alone, who have difficulty moving or are simply a little forgetful, are sometimes unable to test their own smoke alarms and might not be able to do so often enough.

So by offering to do the test for them, you could give an older friend or relative the vital early warning they need if the worst should happen.

The Fire Kills campaign has offered some simple steps to take this winter to keep your older friends and relatives fire safe:

- Check they have smoke alarms at every level in their home and near potential fire risks;
- Test their smoke alarms whenever you visit to help give them the vital extra seconds they need to escape in a fire;
- Look for electrical risks such as frayed wires and overloaded plugs to help reduce the risk in their home;
- Unplug appliances such as heaters and electric blankets when they're not in use;
- If you are a carer, make sure you close household doors at night.

A huge variety of specialist safety equipment is also available to help give vulnerable people the best chance of escape in a fire.

These include vibrating smoke alarms for the hard of hearing, easy-reach smoke alarm testers for those with limited movement and linked alarm systems – just a few options to help people feel safer.

A quick and simple step can provide the extra peace of mind of knowing that the people you care about will get the warning they need to escape in a fire.

So next time you see your older family and neighbours, take a second to test their smoke alarms – it could be a life-saving move.

Offering a wealth of choice

Kingston College offers a wide range of Post 16 options for students including vocational qualifications, A-levels and apprenticeships.

It offers a huge range of subjects to choose from – so whatever your passion it has a course to suit you. You can find out more at the college open evening on February 12 from 4.30pm to 7.30pm.

Durr-e-Maknoon Tariq studied her A-levels at the college. She said: "Coming to Kingston College has been one of the most memorable experiences of my life.

"My tutors gave me excellent guidance and support throughout my two years in all aspects of studying for my A-levels and college life.

"They were always ready to give me extra support when I needed it. The guidance my tutors gave me in terms of my UCAS application and career prospects enabled me to make right university choices. All I had to do was study hard and get the required grades.

"I've really enjoyed studying all my subjects at college. Now that I am studying biomedical sciences at King's College London, I feel the skills I learned and acquired at Kingston College were not only very useful for my studies but also a good introduction to the extracurricular activities and social aspects of university life.

"I would definitely recommend Kingston College to anyone who is thinking of doing A-levels."

Ignas Bieliunas studied a BTEC level 3 extended diploma in sport. He said :"I have thoroughly enjoyed my two years here and have particularly enjoyed being part of the basketball academy which led to me representing Kingston College at the British Colleges Sport National Finals at Bath University.

"I am thankful to all the sports staff as they supported me throughout my studies, enabling me to secure a full academic scholarship at St Mary's University to continue studying sports science."

ANNUAL ANTICS

It will be bums on seats for a cheeky performance this week as Calendar Girls comes to the Arthur Cotterell Theatre in Kingston, writes Jon Sharman.

Eleven brave women will perform the story of Women's Institute members who posed naked to raise money for the hospital where one of their husbands died of cancer.

In the spirit of the original calendar girls, Kingston Vale Operatic and Dramatic Society (KVODS) will also collect donations for Leukaemia and Lymphoma Research after the shows.

Director Katy Goddard says she had no problem getting people involved.

She says: "I was really surprised because I told people they would have to get naked but we actually had more people than we needed for the parts. We've created extra roles – people are getting more than their money's worth when they come to our show.

"Because we've got quite a lot of large-breasted ladies we had quite a lot of fun in rehearsals to get big enough props to disguise their modesty – getting the right size buns.

"It's a bit of a taboo but you do it and then it becomes normal. At first everyone was being a bit coy. We've had a brilliant laugh."

Goddard's former drama teacher Paul Brown died of leukaemia, so when she found out KVODS could put on the show she was thrilled. She says: "He encouraged my passion. It all sort of fell into place and I thought, 'this is a perfect reason to do the show'."

Signs of market recovery

Agents report more people looking to buy

The UK housing market showed further signs of recovery last month according to estate agents, as the number of people actively seeking properties rose to a quarterly high.

Figures from the December 2012 Housing Market Report from the National Association of Estate Agents (NAEA) revealed a rise in the number of house hunters, reaching an average of 282 per branch. This represents an increase on the three months to December and a high-point for the quarter.

TAMASIN COATES
property@london.newsquest.co.uk

The NAEA's December house hunter numbers are up 41 per cent since their lowest December levels in 2008 (200), and are up seven per cent on the previous month, November 2012 (263).

Mark Hayward, president of the NAEA said: "December can typically be a challenging month for the property market, as many buyers abandon their search until the new year.

However, last month's figures show a healthy December boost, and a substantial gain on the mid-recession low of December 2008."

He added: "Demand is clearly returning to areas of the market, and agents are seeing more house hunters looking for their ideal home."

"In this climate it's important that those seeking to buy a home – and particularly first time buyers – have access to affordable mortgage finance.

"The news this week that Lloyds Banking Group will aim to lend £6.5bn in an effort help 60,000 people buy their first home in 2013 is strongly welcomed by the NAEA."

The NAEA Housing Market Report also showed that the percentage of sales made to first time buyers saw a slight decrease in December, with agents recording 21 per cent of market share compared with 22 per cent in November.

The number of sales made by agents fell below the 2012 average with branches recording an average of five sales for the month.

Have you got what it takes to be an agent?

Energy, enthusiasm, confidence and a passion for property – those are some of the key attributes Hamptons International is looking for in candidates for its new training academy.

The estate agency is launching a new training programme to help people start a career in property.

Those interested are invited to submit a short video and an updated CV. The first trainees will begin the training programme in May and there will be two intakes each year. Successful applicants will be offered a six month training programme in a dedicated Hamptons Academy office with one-to-one coaching with an experienced senior mentor.

Andrew Brown, head of human resources at Hamptons International said: "We are thrilled to announce the launch of the academy. It has been established to identify, train and develop those individuals with natural attributes that will make great sales people.

"At a time when unemployment is high, the academy will create fantastic opportunities for those who have a desire to succeed and possess the necessary attributes to work for Hamptons International."

Snow and ice stops big commute

One in five motorists was too afraid to drive

New research commissioned by Green Flag Breakdown reveals Brits missed 51.4 million working hours in the recent snowy conditions.

Over 8.5million (18 per cent) adults were unable to work their contracted hours because of the adverse weather, costing employers an estimated £318million.

Over 3.8 million people missed at least a full day of work as a result of the arctic weather conditions. Over 590,000 people missed at least two days.

The snow and icy conditions kept almost one in five (19 per cent) of motorists off the road because they were afraid of driving.

A further 2.3million (five per cent) tried to take to the roads but were unable to make any headway because of ice.

Despite delays, public transport was seen as a safe refuge in bad weather, with 12 per cent of people taking trains, tubes and buses instead of driving because they felt it was the safer option.

However, millions of people were attracted to the thrill of driving in the icy conditions, with 17 per cent of Brits claiming they enjoyed the challenge of navigating the roads despite the adverse conditions. While a quarter (25 per cent) of men enjoyed the challenge of driving on icy roads, just eight per cent of women felt the same.

Those driving for the 'rush' or challenge of navigating icy roads put themselves, their passengers, other road users and pedestrians at risk as a car that loses control, even at low speeds, can be involved in a serious accident.

Miranda Schunke, spokesperson for Green Flag, said: "Green Flag's service personnel worked round the clock to respond to record volumes of incidents, helping motorists who found themselves in difficulty on the road. In future, we may see more drivers following the continental lead and investing in winter tyres and snow chains to help them cope with difficult driving conditions."

Green Flag Breakdown reports it saw call-outs increase by an average of 88 per cent, compared to the same week last year.

On Tuesday, January 22, incident volumes were 159 per cent higher than the same day last year.

The extremely high demand for breakdown support highlights the risks faced by motorists who take to the roads in severe and icy conditions.

Dowson leads tributes to Dorothy

Kingstonian manager Alan Dowson has paid tribute to the club's oldest fan Dorothy Hall, who died last week.

The 92-year-old, a life member at Kingsmeadow, was a regular at Ks home games and a match sponsor.

Dowson was a regular visitor to Dorothy's Kingston home for tea and biscuits.

She died after failing to recover from a hip operation.

"There are not many characters left in football anymore, but Dorothy was one of them," he said.

Looking up: Howard Fuller is back in the big time

Fuller joins up with Tom O-C

Worcester Park race ace Howard Fuller is set to team up with New Malden's Tom Onslow-Cole in the British Touring Car Championship in 2013 – and he cannot wait to get behind the wheel, writes Stuart Amos.

Team Hard owner Tony Gilham has confirmed the 20-year-old will return to his squad to drive one of his two new VW Passat CC NGTC machines in a yet-to-be-named team for at least a part-BTCC season.

Fuller, who made his championship debut last year for Gilham having claimed a victory for the team in the VW Cup, said: "It has all come together nicely, and it's great to know I'll be on the grid.

"To be bringing the VW Passat to the BTCC grid – along with Tom Onslow-Cole – is a great feeling.

"I am likely to be the youngest guy on the grid, but I'm confident in my own ability and looking forward to the challenge."

Casual's northern delights

by STUART AMOS
samos@london.newsquest.co.uk

Boss Kim Harris may have missed Corinthian Casuals' crucial midweek win at bottom-club Three Bridges, but it turned out he was not needed as his team drew inspiration from an unlikely source.

Casuals, minus their manager due to health reasons, came from 1-0 down to triumph 2-1 last Tuesday thanks to goals from James Cottee and Joe Hicks.

The late cancellation of Sussex-based League One side Crawley Town's home clash with Preston North End meant more than 40 frustrated Lancastrians took the chance to cheer Harris's men on to the points.

The win was even more significant given Saturday's 1-0 home defeat to Walton & Hersham four days later and the former Kingstonian boss, who was absent from the dugout having been in hospital for an operation earlier in the day, could not have been more appreciative.

"I wasn't there, but apparently there was quite a big crowd because the Crawley game was called off at the last minute," he said.

"Tony Davies, Luke Garrard, Paul Stewart and Bryan Adamson – who looked after the team brilliantly – said there were lots of Preston fans cheering us.

"With the Crawley fans cheering for Three Bridges it was a great atmosphere, which helped us. I don't worry about the League, but it was a big win for us."

Harris may yet need a more serious operation, but until then he is looking forward to his side's perennial battle against the Ryman Division One South drop with relish.

"I'm really looking forward to the second half of the season," added Harris, who takes his men to Faversham Town on Saturday.

"We've got kids at the back. The average age is 21 and with so little experience they are doing a fantastic job.

"Young James Cottee is only 19 years old, but he is top drawer. He went off to Met Police for a contract, but has come back to us because he wasn't getting a game."

Competitive edge: Walton & Hersham's Victor Kiri and Corinthian Casuals' Danny Green battle for possession at King George's Fields on Saturday SP73782

Hams: Bognor win one of this season's best

Kingstonian assistant coach Mark Hams labelled his side's 1-0 win at Bognor Regis Town on Saturday as one of their best of the season, writes Taimour Lay.

Striker Wade Small hit the winner with three minutes left on the clock to claim the result that moved Ks up to fourth in the table.

"Let's not make any mistake about it, that is up there with Lowestoft away, Whitehawk away – whatever that proves to be worth – it's a good, good result," said Hams, pictured right.

"Bognor are challenging for the play-offs for a reason. They're not in a false position. They're a phenomenal footballing side.

"You don't know how hard it is when it's so soft under foot.

"It was like dirty dancing at times, with people grabbing hold of each other and trying to push each other out the way."

Boss Alan Dowson signed AFC Wimbledon defender Callum McNaughton last week and let veteran Gary MacDonald join Met Police on loan.

"Gary is an excellent person to have but needs games at the moment," he added.

Ks host mid-table Cray Wanderers on Saturday.

SPORTS*brief*

ATHLETICS: Kingston AC & Polytechnic Harrier Phoebe Law was Kingston's leading performer at the Surrey Schools' Cross Country Championship on Saturday. Law clocked 14 minutes, 48 seconds to come second in the year 11 race – 15 seconds behind winner Felicity Johnston. Kingston's best performing team were the U13 boys, who came second and were led home by Morrison Cleaver (11:26) in seventh.

HOCKEY: Surbiton's men reached the Men's Hockey Cup semi finals with a 4-1 win at Sheffield University Bankers on Sunday, thanks to goals from Rob Schilling, Dave Bartram, Alexander Penney and James Tindall. They host Oxted in the next round on March 17.

JUDO: Karina Bryant's London 2012 judo bronze medal heroics is behind a 12 per cent increase in the number of people participating in the sport in Surrey, according to Active Surrey.

KARATE: Karate twins Cuba and Bleu, 14, are in the England team heading to the European Championships in Turkey this weekend.

RUGBY UNION: Surrey One promotion chasers Kingston go to struggling Cranleigh on Saturday.
